Report:

Narayana engineering college, Nellore Department of ECE conducted a seminar on “NEED OF STRONG WOMEN EMPOWERMENT AND GIRL POWER ” was organized by women’s forum of the ECE department on 26-06-23 at Vishweshwaraya Auditorium, B-Block, NEC Nellore.

The objectives of this program is to convey that Women’s empowerment refers to the process of enabling women to have greater control over their lives and to be able to make their own decisions.

In this session Dr.Murali,HOD of ECE addressed the gathering and introduced the resource person, D.Lahari addressed the gathering. Later the resource person discussed with the students how to the women must be bold enough to face the society and the surrounding places

She Quoted That Women’s empowerment refers to the process of enabling women to have greater control over their lives and to be able to make their own decisions. This can include empowering women to participate fully in the economy and in the political process, as well as empowering them to make decisions about their own health and well-being. Women’s empowerment is important because it can lead to a range of positive outcomes, including increased economic growth and development, improved health and well-being, and greater gender equality.

In India, women’s empowerment has been a key issue for many years. Despite some progress in recent decades, women in India continue to face significant challenges when it comes to gender equality. These challenges include discrimination, lack of access to education and employment, and gender-based violence.

Women in India often face discrimination in many areas of life, including in the home and in the workplace. This can make it difficult for them to access education and employment opportunities, and can lead to unequal treatment and lower pay.

Lack of access to education and employment: Women in India face significant barriers when it comes to accessing education and employment. For example, data from the World Bank shows that only around 50% of women in India participate in the labour force, compared to around 80% of men. This is due in part to cultural and social barriers that prevent women from participating in the workforce, as well as lack of access to education and training.

This is due in part to cultural and social barriers that prevent women from participating in the workforce, as well as lack of access to education and training.

Gender-based violence is a major problem in India. The National Crime Records Bureau reports that in 2021, there were over 428,278 reported cases of violence against women in India. This included incidents of physical and sexual assault, as well as dowry-related violence and female infanticide. The statistics are alarming, with 31,677 reported rapes against women in 2021 alone.

Poverty: Many women in India live in poverty, particularly in rural areas. Poverty can make it difficult for women to access education and employment, and can lead to other challenges such as poor health and malnutrition.

Disparities between urban and rural areas: Women in rural areas of India often face greater challenges when it comes to empowerment. For example, they may have less access to education and health care, and may be more isolated and vulnerable to gender-based violence.

She concluded her speech saying that According to the talkback cards, girl power helps visitors realize their value, love others, achieve their dreams, defy stereotypes, and work together to change the world. Through girl power, girls—and the adults they grow into—reimagine girlhood and define their own identity as individuals and a united group.
