DEPARTMENT OF ELECTRONICS AND COMMUNICATION ENGINEERING

Report on “MOTIVATIONAL SESSION”

ELECTRONICS AND COMMUNICATION ENGINEERING department has arranged a Motivational Session on behalf of “AKHYANA” (students association) on 28.09.2019. Students of II and III Year B.Tech ECE students were participated.

On behalf of AKHYANA Powerful motivational speeches (VIDEOS) were played for students. “If you want to achieve your goals and dreams in life, you need to wake up and go beyond your comfort zone”.

Leaders can motivate and inspire through communications. Great leaders are charismatic and articulate, and they use these attributes to rally the troops. You’ve probably heard or read some of those famous speeches that have helped people at their lowest reach for the highest aspirations.

The following are the collection of inspirational words, sure to motivate you when you need it most from motivational speeches.

- The football film, Any Given Sunday, is a perfect example. What’s more cliché than the coach inspiring the team to get back on the field and win after being humiliated? But not every coach is as motivating as Al Pacino. When he delivers what has become the “The Little Things You Do Daily Matter” speech on the importance of working together, the actor and script combine to create something bigger than both.
- Microsoft founder Bill Gates’ Harvard commencement address shows a side of the successful entrepreneur that might not have been visible through the glare of fame and fortune. He is probably Harvard’s most famous dropout, but he acknowledged that the university’s environment of energy and intelligence was inspiring.
- Vulnerability is not often a topic that inspires and motivates people. We’re all too familiar with being vulnerable. But Brown notes that it’s the fear of failure or of not being good enough that makes us put up walls. These boundaries make it hard to connect with others. But it is by connecting with a larger whole that we can achieve our greatest good and see our own worth reflected in the product of our collaborative process.

- St.John mentions at the start of the video that this talk is a condensed version of 7 years of research (including research from more than five hundred interviews with successful professionals).

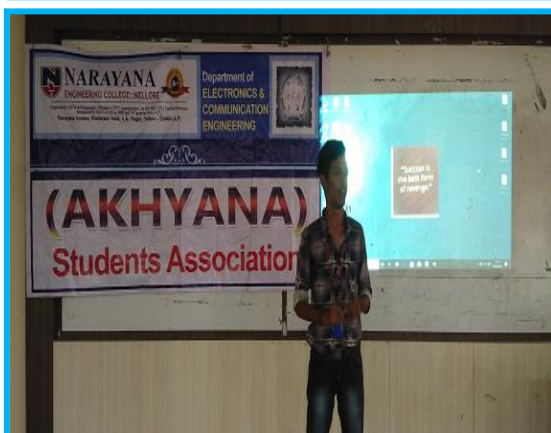

One of the most interesting points that St.John mentions is that if you want to be successful at something, you need to “put your nose down in something and get damn good at it.”

But, the most motivational part of St.John’s speech for us was when he talks about passion.

He said: “if you do something you love then the money comes along later.”

This section of the motivational speech is especially relevant for entrepreneurs – if you’re building a brand then try and be invested in it as much as possible – commitment to the cause will really help you to find success in the long run.

When you’re trying to find success you need to love what you do!
